

Abstract

A portable multi-display device includes at least two panel housings in which a variety of circuits and displays are mounted, the displays being designed adjacent to each other at their one side, and framework for fixing the displays to 5 mount the displays into the panel housings, the framework being provided at its one side with a screen joint portion.